American commiserates British government on account of its trouble with the Fenians. They cannot omplain that our government allows

The Herald, the court paper, assumes a more hostile tone, and says:—
"The truth is, we might almost as well be at open war with the United States as remain as we are, subjected to the hostile incursions of their subjects and exposed to the imminent danger of a civil war of their instigation, which would prove far more disastrous, and far more costly too, than any foreign one we could be engaged in. The dignified and decided conduct of France in her diplomatic communications with the United States on the Mexican question should form an example to be followed by the British cabinet. ** **

There can be but little doubt that Fenianism might quickly be reduced to There can be but little doubt that re-nianism might quickly be reduced to harmless proportions, if Mr. Johnson and his cabinet, seeing the peril of fur-ther inaction, would cut off the supply by means of which propagandists are enabled to make their way into Ireland to seduce our soldiers from their alle-giance and spread disaffection among the people."

The News takes a more reasonable view, and says:-

view, and says:—

"As Mr. Gladstone truly alleged, it would be unworthy in England to address to the United States demands such as those which we have often received, and have always refused to listen to, from continental powers. The Americans are as jealous as we are of the right of sanctuary, though they, like ourselves, do not vouch for the character of their guests in affording them an asylum. We refused at the bidding of the United States to after the laws of England: they cannot be expected at our bidding to go beyond their own laws for our convenience. Further, it may be well to recollect that we manufactured and sent to them the lawlessness which we now ask them to control. We experted that quits this country to our harm. To attack Fenninsin in its true source is not to attack it in the United States, but in the causes, what-ever those may be, which engender the hostility toward this country which every Irish emigrant carries with him abroad, and cherishes in every place."

State News.

We call attention to the advertisement of A. F. Ritchie, of Fairmont, offering certain valuable tracts of land for sale.

ginia. From the Clarksburgh Telegraph There is now a great buzz in the copperhead hive of this State. Meetings are being held at every cross roads in rebel communities, to resolve that they, the copperheads aforesaid, are very indignant, very much outraged at the West Virginia Legislature. Why are these things done? What did the Legislature on at its recent session that was British government on account of its trouble with the Fenians. They cannot complain that our government allows the Fenians here to go on with their schemes. If it should give them active encouragement and recognize them as belligerents at the earliest moment, it would only be following the example so recently set by Great Britain itself. The comments of the English newspapers on the situation are anusing, when compared with what they were accust tomed to say during our civil war. The London Times says coolly:

"The liberty wis how little American institutions are able to protect the interests of foreign nations. We care little, because we are able to take care of our selves, but if we were not, Ireland and Canada might be revolutionized by armies raised, armed and officeral with the United States in spite of the United States in Spite public safety alone, and as soon as it shall have been seen that the public safety will not be jeopardized by it, we would have all distribities removed.

We will say frankly to the rebels and their sympathizing friends, that the steps they are now taking in abusing our Legislature are only prolonging the distribities thrown upon them.—While a party exists whose object is palpably to legislate for the benefit of rebels the Union party will assuredly guard against the encroachments of that party. The Union party will assuredly guard against the encroachments of that party. The Union party made the new State—it sustained the Government during the rebellion, and the will control matters its own way, and when the rebels are restored to the privileges, it will be done by the Union party—not by the copperhead faction that is so given to indignating. The Union party will deal justly, but it will not be builted into measures, and however angry copperheads may feel, they had better smother their indignation, and quelty "bide their time."

Men who have done all in their power to overthrow our Government and only yielded when compelled to, cannot expect to be restored immediately to the same rights as loyal men possess. We have never thought that it would be policy to keep disabling acts long in force. Times change, and the political aspects of the country are continually taking new phases, and new issues in process of time will efface the old ones upon which the people are now divided, and in the course of a few years it may be prudent to restore all to their privileges, but now the cause of our recent strife is in the minds of all. The line of distinction is plainly marked. Time will obliterate the cause of hate, and new issues will beget new interests, and it is to be hoped a healthy commingling of sentiment, but a few years probation will not hurt the rebels, and it is to be hoped a healthy commingling of sentiment, but a few years probation will not hurt the rebels, and it is to be hoped a healthy commingling of sentiment, but a few years probation will not hurt the rebels and the power to do it, but for the public safety alone, and as soon as its shall have been seen that the public safety alone, and as soon as its shall have been seen that the public safety alone, and as soon as its shall have been seen that the public safety alone, and as soon as its shall have been seen that the public safety alone, and as soon as its shall have been seen that the public safety will not be jeopardized by it, we would have all distribilities removed.

The scene is laid at the close of the revolution, and just before the days of the Directoire, and a great part takes place in the salons of Madame Tallien. General Bonaparte passes on the stage and has ten lines to recite (which ten lines by the way, gave rise to serious deliberations whether the part assigned the ancestor of the present Emperor was sufficiently dignified to be placed under the eyes of his successor!) Madame Beautharuals. Josephine also crosses the back of the saloon, in which the beauty of the early part of the century, Madame Tallien holds her levies, and where General Hoche and the best known names of the future Empire are to be seen. The whole piece, in fact, is made the vehicle for sentiments in which the French heart rejoices, and is a sort of glorification of that period of her history of which France has placed.

At the second ball given by Mrs. Munroe, the number of these worn by some of the younger married ladies was remarkable, as was the exceeding loveliness of many of the young girls present. Among these a Miss Torrance quite carried off the palm of beauty. This young lady was presented the other day at court, and, with a Miss Hitchcock, another American beauty, produced quite a sensation. It is a general remark that the balls given by our country women are more than usurally attractive from the number of pretty persons present, the universal good taste and freshness of the tollettes, and the general air of enjoyment of the dance of the younger portion of the company.

I hev had hopes of Androo Johnson. My waitin sole hez bin centered onto him for a year back. He wuz the Moses with I spected wood lead the Democrisy out uv the desolate Egypt into which we hev bin making bricks without straw, for five long, weary and dreary years. O how I hev waited, day after day, and week after week, and month after month, for some manifestation of Dimocrisy, wich is satisfatory—suthin tangible—suthin that I cood take hold on.
Faith is the substance of things hoped for and the evidence of things not seen, wich is all right so far ez religion ez concerned, but uv no account in politix. A friend uv mine who wuz a monomaniack on the subjeck uv faith, undertook to live on it, under the insane belief that ef a man hed faith pork wuz unnecessary. Wuz the experiment a success? Not any. When he commenst the trial he weighed two hundred, in a week he wuz down to now hundred, in a week he wuz down to he commenst the trial he weighed two hundred, in a week he wuz down to one hundred and twenty-five, and in fonteen days he slept in the valley!

I hev been livin on faith for a year or more, and I too am thin. My bones show, light shines through me—I am faint and sick! Oh for suthin that I can see and feel! suthin solid.

Our Dimocratic noosepapers are supportin Andreo Johnson. They claim that his polisy is our polisy, that he is ourn and we are hisn. They are singly hosanners to him—at his every act they exclaim halleloogy in korus. What is it all about? In what pertikeler hez Androo Johnson showed hisself to be a Dimokrat?
